

PUBLICATIONS AND CHAMBERS WEBSITE

Reviewed September 2020

Chambers encourages its members to publish legal articles and works. For clarification, the following points should be noted.

Publications

1. Anyone is entitled to publish whatever they like. The only Chambers constraints are the obvious ones which are reflected in our GDPR policy, set out below:

16.20 Social or any other media must never be used to make any defamatory or damaging comments about Chambers, barristers, colleagues within the workplace, or those associated with Chambers, including clients.

19.36 The internet should never be used to send, receive, browse, download or store material which may be illegal, offensive or cause embarrassment to Chambers or to others.

2. The only constraints on content, length, timing of publication or any other matter (apart from professional and Chambers obligations) are those imposed by the editor or publisher of the work in question. Chambers has no say in the relationship between publisher and author.

Chambers Website

3. Any article or work published by a legal publisher or journal may be referred to on the Chambers website. Hyperlinks to the full article or work may be used provided the publisher agrees in writing or by email, although hyperlinks to advertisements for the work are not permitted. Subject to practicality, the full article may also be made available on Chambers website on the same terms.
4. Articles or works of a non-legal nature or legal articles published in non-legal journals may appear on the same terms, but only with the agreement of the Website Committee. Each case will be considered on its merits and will certainly not be granted automatically.

Red Lion Chambers

Website Committee & BDMC - 7 Sep 2020